Many Colored Graduates

The Afro-Americans of Rochester and surrounding counties should well feel proud of the young people in our midst, who have achieved the first milestones in the field of education, by following through a thorough education reaching the pinnacle and their goal during the month of June.

From a survey recently taken we find that there are approximately 50% of all recent recorded music "Birmingham Breakdown" will doubt be acclaimed as one of the finest arrangements to come from the pen of the Duke. Written a decade ago, "Birmingham Breakdown" was designed at the time as too far advanced for the era. Today, the new version has been arranged to satisfy the next generation. Follow thru in this column in our next issue and hear about Club Callaway, Teddy Wilson, Midge Williams, Andy Kirk, L. Millinder and others.

Education: An Asset or Liability (Editorial—H. W. C.)

What class of people will have confidence in or give their support to a teacher, preacher, lawyer or physician who knows only the A. B. C. of his Profession? Is it a historian as well as a scientific fact that no person can be educated or instructed by a strong intellect and without a strong and intellectual and moral class permeating and filling the entire maras? The aim or purpose of education is always and always will be, and every single complete thing in the human race to be useful in one's day and generation and to live happily. To accomplish this requires the quick acquisitive knowledge found in two fields of human endeavor. First, man and his environment and the natural and external nature; second, training to intelligent and productive activity in the use of this knowledge and the use of the common sense.

4. Negro John Doe: A Day Upon the Life of Our Afro-American Graduate Co-Op. League for our own mutual benefit and for those who are privileged; it is because of privilege that he cannot live, that he must exist and take the few crumbs that fall from the table. Of course there is an answer to all this, and the answer can be supplied by the progressive Co-Op. League. For instance, there is a record of a Negro who feels that way, but he cannot sympathize with her if she has it for the better of her. She will very, very, very rarely set out to harm the color of any race or at the end of the summer, a condition that makes him love his brother as he truly is.

He professes ambition to become a street-washer and have a fine, intelligent wife. Father Chevillon (Jean Hersholt), wise and tolerant priest, can do nothing to convert Chico. Chico rescues Diane (Simone Simon) from a beating being administered by a neighboring woman. Father Chevillon concludes it is wise to leave her in Chico's care. Chico thwarts police off the track by posing as Diane's husband and then is forced to live it out. When the World War breaks out, Chico enlists. Diane becomes a nurse. After the Armistice, Diane returns to their little garret and finds Chico waiting—he is blind, but imbued with faith in God and love for her.

Rich Man vs. Hell

Justice is the foundation of God's throne. Any doctrine, therefore, that violates justice and caste reproach upon God's name should be carefully scrutinized before heed is given to it. The doctrine of eternal torment does violate justice and reproaches God's name. The clergy have relied upon the scriptures concerning the rich man in hell and the poor man in Abraham's bosom to prove the doctrine of eternal torment. That scripture is a parable and does not teach eternal torment of the wicked. The scripture is found in Luke 16:19-31 and should be carefully read.

I quote verses 19-23 as follows: "There was a certain rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day; and there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, who was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table; moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom; the rich man also died and was buried, and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and saw Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. A parable is a statement in symbolic language, the purpose of which is to teach a lesson by way of illustration. The clergy insist that this scripture is not a parable but is a literal statement of fact. To apply the scripture literally makes it a very solemn and awful one, we will see. The record is that one man was rich, another was poor. The rich man was, and had plenty to eat, and was died and went to hell. No other thing appears in the record against him. To be rich is surely no cause for being eternally tormented. Lazarus was in the bosom of the world and ungodly, and you could not get a clergyman to appear at his funeral and say that this man had gone to hell because he was rich, wore good clothes and had plenty to eat.

The other man was a pauper clothed in rags, covered with sores, and lay at the rich man's gate begg- ing. He died and was carried away by the angels into Abraham's bosom, and the clergy say that means that he was taken by the angels to heaven merely because they are the rich man's gate. Surely so would it be unreason- ably believe that God takes men to heaven merely because they are poor and covered with sores and lie at someone's gate to beg. If that were the rule, then very few who claim that they are going to heaven would ever get there. You seldom see a clergyman in the miserable condition of the poor.

Oh, the world owes me a living—what the young boys and girls will be saying when school is out. Do you think it would be called hill billy? They tell me it's hill billy now. Know why? It is that a certain boy loves to tease my little friend! She certainly put up a great fight! Our friend who makes eggs come out of people's pockets should just get himself a little place and charge admission and some day he would become rich. The dance at halftime was a great success. It seems that a certain girl wanted to fight, but boys aren't worth fighting over, you know? You see there are more fish in this sea, just waiting to be caught. The Masons had a fine dinner served to them, yours truly enjoyed waiting table. Who is our Butler and Egg man after the, you know? He is a dangerous man—say Woodrow, who is so bashful; if you wish to see something of a guy, say it. Oh, he's the way Mr. J. B. Smith certainly looked in his uniform at the Little Blue Restaurant; now girls don't rush up to see him. He is going to be a chauffeur now and men will go into see where a certain friend is. No, wouldn't that kill you, but perhaps he can't help it. Say Pete, be careful what you say in front of everyone, you don't know how you may be hurt. If you don't be careful, you know.
