The Negro's Burden

I believe I am quoting correctly when I quote a few lines from an old hymn which has ever remained a part of me, quote: "Jesus will bear all of our burdens." How true these words and let's think how much we need Him today in this changing world. I have been and am an excellent religious back-ground because of my religious all through life has opened new vistas for me as well as many other Negro boys and girls.

As I look back now upon that training I find myself wondering whether or not the Negro really has a true conception of Jesus Christ. I know seems to me that the Negro was taught more or less how to die and not any too much how to live from day to day. He was taught very little about business, economics, community life, politics and conditions. He was taught that God will bear all our burdens therefore with simple faith he consented to them all.

I do not believe that this is the case. What has ever remained a part of me, quote: "Jesus will bear all of our burdens." How true these words and let's think how much we need Him today in this changing world. I have been and am an excellent religious background because of my religious all through life has opened new vistas for me as well as many other Negro boys and girls.

How It Feels To Face Death

As told to Bill Adams by Leland Pennington

(Notes: This Voice Newspaper Correspondent received the following information directly from the bedside of the lad whose miraculous escape from death is still something to be wondered at.)

"I was riding my bicycle down the street at a rapid pace when a truck suddenly shot out of a side street and tumbled directly in front of me on the wrong side of the street. It was an absolute impossibility for the truck driver to avoid hitting me and it looked as though he would hit me head-on. However, I was quick enough to sense the fact that I would have to act fast if I hoped to see another day dawn and so I shot through my body but thought that I had been hurt but little.

For a moment I remained where I had fallen and then I tried to get up. The pain I then felt was so intense that I fell back to the ground, agonizing in agony. Soon I felt myself being carried and I was placed on the bed of the ambulance.

It was not until after my leg had been cared for that I realized that I had suffered injuries elsewhere. My head had received an awful bump in my fall and I could hear bells ringing inside although they failed to effect the pain I felt. Although I am grateful that I am still alive, I am afraid that I will never wish to experience such an ordeal again. It.

I feel sure that if I had not been so lucky in my escape I would have been worse for the experience. The doctors are still of the opinion that I will be all right in the end, although I shall have to be amputated due to the severity of the fracture, but I am grateful that I am still alive.

Before writing a final to what has gone before, I feel that a tribute should be paid to the medical men who so cheerfully and silently suffered the consequences of their work. I am sure that where less hardy souls would have bewailed their misfortune so that all might know of their plight, "Stick" had a smile on his face from the time I entered his hospital room until the time I was ready to depart had arrived. He was still smiling when I left the room and it is such spirit as this that deserves the utmost praise and the admiration of all. Therefore, in closing, I would say that "Stick"—he has what it takes.

My dear Mr. and Mrs. Coles:

Congratulations on the fifth anniversary of "The Voice." As you know, I have been a subscriber almost from its inception. I am sure that it is a force for good in the community.

Accept my best wishes for your continued success, which I am sure is shared by all of your subscribers.

Very sincerely yours,

Sports of All Sorts

By Bill Adams

RAMBLES IN COLLEGIATE CIRCLES

A summer on the wane and the fall season fast approaching, it is our turn to turn our heads away from the diamond and pay some attention to the gridiron. Of course we cannot overlook the world series which this crowning event of the baseball season has been marked by the New York Yankees consistent winning of said series.

From a true sportsmanlike attitude, one must admit that a team good enough to win the world series with such consistency should not be deprived recognition for its achievement. However, from the financial side let's get back to football.

One of its most successful campaigns, what with All-American Brud Holland back at his end position and ready to carry the bulk of the burden in the Big Red forward wall. Assisting Brud will be most of last year's eleven which accounted for five wins out of the seven games played, and unless Holland suffers injury or a complete reversal of form, he should once more be one of the most feared wingmen in the East and a candidate for an All-American berth.

At Syracuse, Wilmeth Sidat-Singh is again one of the leading aspirants for a backfield berth on Bill Orange's eleven. Singh is considered cinch to retain his last year's status as a member of the team when he was one of Syracuse's most consistent gainers. However, he will not play in the Maryland game as the same situation will exist this year as it did last when, if you can recall, Singh was kept on the bench due to the prejudice of the part of the Southerners.

Lacking information about other colored stars of last year, many of whom have graduated, I shall turn my attention toward basketball.

Here's a sip for you followers of the court pastime. If you see the name of Russ Robinson included in the line-ups of the basketball teams this winter, don't be surprised. Last year Russ was one of the mainstays of the Reserve team and with a bit more experience he should prove to be a tough man to beat for a position on the Quaker squad. There are any number of prospectives among our colored boys in high school today if only they would try out for the team and not get discouraged if they failed to make it their first time out. I trust that a goodly number of them will heed my word and make an honest attempt for a position on their school team.

NEWS SETTES

It's hello again and that means it's Bill again, with not much to offer again. It may not make any sense to you, nor does it to me, but what's the dif? I have to say something and even if it's nonsense there is somebody who needs to know that it's going on. However, I have heard that:

Betty Sprague has evidently forgotten all about W. Woods, the reason being a handsome chap by the name of Samuel White. What I'm wondering is—who's sorry now?

Is a certain party using Russ Robinson as a name?

Some far-seeing person who aspires to be an author might well use "The Affairs of Coritha" as the title of his first novel. This book would undoubtedly appeal to Miss King especially if the leading romantic interests on the male side were by the names of Taylor, Johnson, etc.

Dame rumor has it that yours truly has something more than a friendly interest in the Morton St. Miss, and though it might possibly be true, I ain't a saying, and you, dear readers, may take this in whatever way you care to.

Well, I guess it is time for me to take a powder before I print something I shouldn't or have I done so already?

Mumford News

Rev. Turpin preached a fine sermon Sunday morning, his text being taken from the 3rd chapter of 1st Corinthians. In the evening communion services were held and was well attended.

Mrs. Ross Parker of the Creek Road called on Mrs. Blackburn on Labor Day and Mrs. Geo. Wilson and family called on Mrs. Coles the same day.

Mrs. Carpenter family and L. Lee motored to Oland Labor Day and Mrs. H. Wilson called on Mrs. Blackburn Tuesday.

F. Rivers is some better at this writing.

A new furnace is being installed in the church.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Corrine Jose of New York City, sister of Mrs. J. E. Adams, is visiting in our city for a few days. Mrs. Jose is a member of the Salem Church, president of Queen of Joy, and president of several other clubs and is a member of the following fraternal orders in New York: The Elks, Household of Ruth, Courts of Calais and the Eastern Star.

Another of the fairer sex also visited relatives in Rochester during the month of August. We refer to Mrs. Margaret Echels, niece of Mrs. R. Booker of Oregon Street. Mrs. Echels was accompanied to Rochester by her two very charming children, Junior and Sister, who were shown the city by their couvin Miss Wilma Calloway. B. Calloway was not on hand to greet her relatives, because at present he is in the CCC camp. Mrs. Echels and her two children returned to their home in New Rochelle, New York, by auto as Mr. Echels motored to Rochester to take them back East.
