WHAT? could be more appropriate to begin a column on Valentine's Day than a wedding especially as it is pleasantly surprising to find that both Miller and John Jacob Simon, III. The couple appeared happy and posed where they were to be married in St. Louis, Mo. After the vows were spoken they were rushed back to their parents, Mrs. and Mr. H. S. Simon, in their palatial colonial house. Monday morning came their visit to their studies at St. Louis University where both are in law. John is working towards his degree in engineering, while Barbara is studying for a master's degree in medical social work.

"A LADY PASSING FAIR"

This is the new play at the Shubert Theatre starring Tweetie Hiller. "A Lady Passing Fair" is the story of Miss Minnie Johnson, played by Dorothy Rich. The play is set in the late 1800s and deals with the racial discrimination and social injustices faced by African Americans during that time. The play highlights the struggles and aspirations of everyday people, particularly women, for equality and recognition in a society that often treated them as second-class citizens.

"A Lady Passing Fair" is a poignant reminder of the challenges faced by early African American women in the struggle for civil rights and social equality. The play serves as a窗口 into the past, offering a glimpse into the lives and experiences of those who fought for justice and progress in the face of adversity. Through its narrative, it emphasizes the resilience and determination of those who refused to be silenced or marginalized, thereby inspiring future generations to continue the fight for a more just and equitable society.

In conclusion, "A Lady Passing Fair" is a thought-provoking production that explores themes of race, gender, and social justice. It invites audiences to reflect on the historical context and the ongoing struggle for equality, encouraging a deeper understanding of the past and a commitment to the future.
Out With The Mud-Slingers

The recommendation to cast mudslingers is a political posture, made by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg to Malcolm Cowley, the former public administrator, with a few exceptions. He recommended, made in an address on the Red Cross, an imperiousness of a political posture, with a few exceptions. But for the sake of decency and honest election, we wish you could find a way to put deliberate, self-appointed, political ideal and slander out of business.

An Unforgivable Failure

About the least thing you could do Monday, February 17, is to fail to go to the polls and vote. This would show that you approve of Monroe Talmadge's proposal "white primary" in Georgia. You would then be in a category that even Talmadge would feel comfortable toward, since one had to take the trouble to stop you from voting. You stopped yourself.

You have an important duty to perform Monday, February 17. You must nominate candidates to the Recorder's Court, Common Pleas Court, Circuit Court, and a County Auditor. These are very important judicial positions. There are, among the candidates, two Negroes who deserve your support, not because they are Negroes necessarily, but because they are men well qualified for the positions they are running for. Your vote may help them get nominated. Charles Smith, and Edward A. Henry, two good and prominent attorneys in Atlanta, deserve your support.

You should cast your vote for the man you intend to support in the primary election because of the states of all the political parties.

In America, there really shouldn't have to be a law for free elections, for if one man is running for the office, the other men are up for election who will be fair and impartial and see that all men get an impartial trial before the law. These are very important judicial positions.

Punish Cheaters On Jobless Pay

The recent conviction of a man for fraudulently receiving jobless pay, and the payment of $500 to his relatives, is an indication of the seriousness with which the state will deal with jobless cheaters. The state is making a determined effort to prevent the cheating of the unemployed and to prevent the misappropriation of their benefits.

Soviet Opposes List of Rights

Lakers Bosse, N. Y., 1858.

The list of rights for the unemployed is an important matter. The unemployed need protection and support. The government is making a determined effort to provide for the unemployed. The unemployed should be provided with a decent living, adequate training, and employment opportunities. They should be able to live a normal and productive life.
