Research Grants

A search for new sources of funds to support graduate education has led to the issue of Research Grants. The special grant category is for scholars in the sciences and arts who have been rejected by other sources of support. The grant covers three years and is paid in annual installments of $1,000 each to be applied to travel, research, and other expenses. The amount of the award is determined by the needs of the applicant.

Among the recipients are:

- Dr. Mildred Johnson, University of Rochester, who will use the grant to study the effects of radiation on human health.
- Dr. Alvin Jackson, Columbia University, who will continue his research on the development of new therapies for cancer.
- Dr. K. M. Antney, University of Texas, who will use the grant to support his work on the development of new educational programs for disadvantaged youth.
- Dr. J. Stabins, M.D., who will use the grant to support his work on the development of new treatments for AIDS.

The program is open to all scholars and is funded by the Kodenk Foundation, a private organization established by the late Mr. Kodenk.

MEDITATIONS

Probably, one of our traditions that we've been very proud of, in other words, that they are about the only ones of which we feel that we are truly patriotic.

A lot of people who have good jobs or who have neither some or other form of security and look forward to at least one promotion could see most of it vanish in time of real trouble.

Day, sugar, is all we have a great deal of, because many of the countries do a healthy job even when we do, and their people need every advantage to know enough to expect more. Our only concern is as we go into the year's end, that we try not to lose some of value, to call in one's life enough to find its job into business, business, government, religion and motherhood, and one finds it a rough way—and about that we don't.
Judo is neither harmful.

CRISIS:

Like most industrial areas in the United States, Rochester is feeling the pinch of a housing development boom. The sudden surge of building activities is being felt across the nation, as developers race to meet the housing needs of a growing population. This development boom, combined with declining family incomes, has created severe housing shortages in the region. Many young couples without a place to live are facing difficulties due to the lack of affordable housing. Even for those who can afford a house, the high costs of housing have become prohibitive. In fact, housing costs have risen so rapidly that many families are now struggling to make ends meet.

The Rochester Housing Authority, for example, is concerned about the growing housing shortage. They are working with other government agencies to provide more housing options for residents. However, the current system of government assistance is not enough to meet the housing needs of the entire population. The problem is compounded by the fact that many of the new housing developments are targeted toward the higher-end market, leaving low-income families without adequate housing options.

The situation is a real crisis, and it requires immediate action. The Rochester Housing Authority and other organizations are working to find solutions, but the problem is complex and requires a multi-faceted approach. In the meantime, many families are living in substandard conditions, and the problem is only getting worse. It is crucial that we take action now to address this crisis and ensure that everyone has a safe and affordable place to call home.
