Dear Friend:

In this period of national stress, no agency, organization, or community can remain unaffected by the racial unrest and disenchantment that has been gripping our nation. At this time, the problems that have given rise to black activism are political and social in nature; they are the resounding effects of centuries of hatred against black people, and they are part of a larger, worldwide phenomenon.

Understanding and addressing these issues will require a commitment of resources and a commitment of facts, and that commitment is something that cannot be left to government or the business community alone. The Rochester Urban League has been responding to these needs with the formation of various initiatives, including the Black American Families Conference, which seeks to provide a platform for discussion and understanding.

The conference will feature presentations by a range of talented individuals, including academics, activists, and community leaders. We invite you and your associates to participate in this key event. Sincerely,
