In whiskey, taste is a matter of preference. We can't tell you one whiskey tastes better than another. Nobody can. You have to decide for yourself.

But we can tell you this: The taste of Seagram's 7 Crown is unique. It has a flavor no other whiskey can match. Be it straight, on the rocks, or any way you prefer. It has a taste of 7 Crown than any Scotchor Canadian.

Send Schlitz.

Enjoy it. You've got a lot to live.
Kodak reports to the community

Jay Street will never be the same.

Not if our neighbors, just west of our State St. offices, can help it. That’s why they call their neighborhood organization WEDGE, after the tool used to raise things. And WEDGE has found out that when it comes to raising and moving people, photography is a pretty useful tool to work with.

Last year, WEDGE came to Kodak with the problem of how to raise people’s interest in their neighborhood. They thought the camera seemed like a natural solution, and Kodak furnished WEDGE youths with film, cameras, and some technical assistance (through a special national program we participate in along with other photographic manufacturers). Training was volunteered by Kodak Park’s Tim Mathers and Dan Houthan, and then the kids really went to work.

After three months of shooting, they selected from hundreds of slides the 120 which best told the story of WEDGE in a neighborhood, but city-wide interest in WEDGE as a community organization—That’s why they call their neighborhood or—Jay Street will never be the same. They thought the campaign seemed like a natural solution, and photography is a pretty useful tool to work with.

This year, we hope to continue our association with the people of WEDGE, because we believe in the way they are trying to help their neighborhood, too.

Plenty of fire, but little smoke.

One of the simplest ways to dispose of rubbish is simply to burn it. But all too often, this solution has just meant substituting air pollution for landscape pollution. We are tackling both of these problems head on with a new solid waste disposal system located south of Ridge Road between Mt. Read Boulevard and Dewey Avenue.

When this system goes to work this fall, it will be able to dispose of up to 300 tons of solid waste every day.

The invention nobody needed.

Give up.

It’s a Bacon De-Curler.

And even though the customers stayed away in droves, we think this Junior Achievement venture was worthwhile, because a score of teenagers learned the hard way that the world wasn’t quite ready for uncurled bacon at breakfast.

Progress by degrees.

Many Kodak men and women and their families have anxiously awaited this time of year. For them, June means graduation. And this June, 160 Kodak people graduated from area colleges and universities with degrees ranging from the Associate to the Doctoral degree.

Most of them took advantage of the Kodak Tuition Aid plan which pays 100% of tuition costs for an employee who qualifies for aid and successfully completes course work. More than 4,000 Kodak people in the U.S. received this aid, totalling nearly a million dollars this year. This is the kind of educational progress that benefits the entire community, and we’re proud of the Kodak people who worked so hard and long to attain it.

The idea behind this new system is to convert all kinds of waste into small, uniform particles that permit efficient destruction. First, a gigantic 800-horsepower shredder easily shatters scrap lumber, crates, and other large items into chunks about 4 inches in size. Then a second, 700-horsepower shredder crumbles these chunks and other waste such as paper and plastic into even smaller bits.

These bits are stored in a silo from which a conveyor belt moves them to a boiler. There they are blown into an oil-fired boiler furnace. Steam produced by the burning is fed into a nearby steam turbine to generate power for plant services at Kodak Park. Dust, fly ash, and other particles rising from the burning will be trapped by an electrostatic precipitator. The gas that will finally leave the chimney will be substantially cleaner than that required by the state and county air pollution codes.

Together with our King’s Landing Water Treatment Plant on the Genesee River, the new solid waste disposal system is further evidence of our continuing concern for the environment we all share.
THE FREDERICK DOUGLASS VOICE

EDITORIAL PAGE

The Silent One

By emphasizing how little the public sees of this world, people become saturated with the idea that only those who speak up and are heard are truly important. This is a powerful message, but one that often comes at the expense of those who choose to remain silent. In a world where noise and activity are celebrated, it's crucial to remember the value of quiet and introspection. The voice of those who speak out loudly and clearly can be heard, but the wisdom of those who keep their counsel can be just as profound. Let's not forget the power of the silent observer, who may be the one who truly understands the silent moments that shape our world.

43—In February 1967 this publication and the U.S. Postal Department issued a commemorative stamp for Frederick Douglass. This newspaper worked for 26 years to bring this about.

44—The publisher of this newspaper was elected to the Board of Directors of "Action For A Better Community, Inc." by a plurality of 122 votes during an election conducted throughout the "Target Area." He was subsequently elected secretary to the Board of Directors, where he served for over 21 years. He resigned to return to the publication of historical materials that have to do with the Generals Companies.

45—In April 1967-1968 the University of Rochester on the urging of the editor of this newspaper, sponsored the Frederick Douglass Sesquicentennial Lectures, a series of six lectures. After the series the University named one of its large faculty and dining halls for Frederick Douglass.

46—The editor asked that the imposing bust of Frederick Douglass, be brought down from the University left, and be placed in the Rotunda of the Frederick Douglass Hall. This particular work of art had been given to the University in the early days of the beginnings of this great institution.

47—In November 1968 the Rochester Board of Education acted on the request of this newspaper, asking that one of their new schools (which was then nearing completion) be named for Frederick Douglass, the Great Emancipator. This was done and the editor along with the popular Omie Davis gave the main addresses on Dedication Day. In June of this year 1968... the editor was asked to give the main address and take part in the "Laying of the Corner Stone."

48—In October 1968 this newspaper petitioned the County Legislature to have constructed a likeness of F. Douglass (a bust) and have it placed in the Hall of Justice. Word has just been received today regarding this particular project. Plans are now under way.

50—There are many milestones that have been passed, as well as, many "firsts" that have been awarded to those persons who have been connected with this newspaper from its inception. However, ".Memory" will not always bring them to mind. Suffice us to say that, besides its editor and publisher there have been other intrepid persons, who have made a lasting contribution to the success of the "Voice"—that is if we look at it that way. And lastly... We must not forget those who have opposed us and every thing done through the years that we have tried to do. However, in remembering them, we say, forgive—forgive.

LOUIS ANGELES, CALIF. - What a major Los Angeles victory for the American Federation of Labor, AFTRA, the Hollywood film workers' union, a court has ruled that Fox Films has committed an unfair labor practice by locking-out employees whose contracts have expired.

The court ordered that the union be reinstated and that Fox Films pay out the back wages due to the locked-out employees.

AFTRA president, Edward F. Swasey, said, "We are extremely pleased with the court's decision. This is a great victory for the workers and a victory for justice."

Jeff Swasey indicated that he would have to consult with the International AFL-CIO, at least, before he could decide what action to take.

The Committee stated that the AFTRA's Fair Practices Board, the Federal Government, should work immediately to correct the situation. At an early date, there will be a hearing between the Arbitration Council and all other workers and management in the industry.

Jeff Swasey indicated that he would consult with the International AFL-CIO, at least, before he could decide what action to take.
