approximately 6,000 registered and live in Midtown Manhattan. A person can easily identify progress in a black community. Voters on the left, and certainly can’t be progress.

but not as one organization, but many different organizations that are working on all kinds of issues. Underprivileged and deprived. I am wondering why all of these like to know what percentage of being spent for the so-called deprived and underprivileged. All the Federal aide that is dumped into Rochester, not to the black brothers, but to the black brothers, we still have police brutality. The so-called Model Cities Program, had announced his full support for the Community Action Program in Rochester.

I would suggest to all of the representatives here in Rochester, "If you are not real, why not just stand up and say that you are not real?"

College Campaign

State Senator Buda Patsen, Democratic-Liberal candidate for Lieutenant Governor, was questioned by a panel of some of the city’s leading jurists in a half-hour, in depth, no holds barred interview, on Channel 8, WOR-TV, on Thursday night, October 28.

Patsen’s campaign manager, Assemblyman Thomas J. B. DePeters, and the Goldberg-Paterson headquarters had decided it was the half-hour time to give the populist governor greater visibility because many of the city’s programs that had ignored the Lieutenant Governor’s race in setting up their interview programs.

NEW PARTY ENDORSEMENT FOR GOLDBERG-PATERSON TICKET

The Socialist party of New York has endorsed the state Democratic ticket of Arthur J. Goldberg and Basil A. Patsen, yesterday as well as the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, Richard L. Ottinger.

In a statement issued at the party’s headquarters, 112 Broadway, the Socialist group said that it was supporting "the Goldberg-Paterson ticket because they were forward-looking in contrast to the Rockefeller-Paterson slate led by Governor Rockefeller and Senator Basil A. Paterson in his historic race to become the state’s first Negro Lieutenant Governor."

Patsen is a supporter of a number of important issues of legislation the past four years. His bills included the Abortion Reform Bill liberalizing the state’s archaic anti-abortion laws, the City-owned Shunt Housing Bill which permits tenants to use the city for housing; and the Fourth Plaintiff Bill providing greater police protection during high crime hours.

In Albany, Charlie gained the reputation as a man who knows the mechanics of government and can get things done. He was a sponsor for a number of important pieces of legislation the past four years. On TOP, with Tony Douglas.

Maybe you didn’t know it, but you live in a town where many inner-city teenagers like Tony Douglas spend their summers working with policemen. They do it through an organization called TOP—Teens on Patrol, an organized attempt to improve understanding between youth and local law enforcement officers.

Hired as police employees of the Rochester Police Bureau, the teens take a two-week training course and are then assigned to help patrol city playgrounds, parks, and other recreational areas. In many cases, their mere presence has prevented possible rowdism, vandalism, or other acts which might have provoked confrontations with police.

This past summer the TOP programs reached 79 young people through the cooperation of the Rochester Police Bureau and Rochester Jobs Inc., with funding help from Kodak. The teenagers got an inside look and a better appreciation of a city policeman’s job, and police got to know 70 city teenagers a lot better. Our hats are off to both the kids and the police on a job well done together.

Who owns Kodak?

At last count, over 24,000 Kodak employees were participating in our Savings and Investment Plan, which is available to help supplement retirement income through a long-term investment program. Participants elect to have us deposit all or a portion of their anticipated Wage Dividend with a trustee, who invests the money in one or more of three funds. Most of the money is invested in Eastman Kodak common stock, but it can be invested in a diversified group of preferred and common stocks or in U.S. Government securities.

Many employees also participate in a pay-roll deduction stock plan.

All these Kodak people, and others in the community who have invested in Kodak stock, create a “people’s capitalism” that enables the community to share in the rewards of free enterprise.

Who owns Kodak?

Lots of people do, but mostly it’s you, your neighbors, and Kodak people themselves. Altogether around 45,000 share owners in this area alone. All we can say is thanks for the vote of confidence. We couldn’t work for nicer people.

Fish don’t like it—and neither do we!

Mercury pollution.

There isn’t a more ruinous element known in the manufacture of photographic film. Even in tiny amounts, mercury can fog miles and miles of film.

Now, with government agencies recently having discovered alarmingly high mercury levels in fish caught in fresh-water lakes, we are in a position to share our knowledge of mercury control with public health officials everywhere. We’re making available a bibliography of technical know-how developed during our 30-year struggle to keep mercury out of our Kodak Park manufacturing environment.

Over the years, some mercury detection methods we’ve developed range up to 100 times more sensitive than those generally employed elsewhere.

Knowledge, procedures, and techniques contained in the bibliography will show public health officials how to prepare samples to test for the presence of mercury—even how to assemble a reliable analyzer, using basic materials found in any laboratory. Knowledge gained should go a long way toward giving many communities efficient, low-cost mercury-monitoring capability.

It’s nice to know that not only have we learned some ways to keep mercury pollution from putting us out of business, now we can help make sure it won’t put you out of business either.

The President....

When Rochester Savings Bank decided to issue Passport Savings Accounts and seal the customer's picture in the passbook's front cover—the first time any savings bank in the country has done it—they hired talented impersonator David Frye to lend his many faces to the television commercials. This passbook mock-up was created for the videotaping. RSB President F. Stanley Devoy was strolling by the mock-up one day and obliged a photographer seeking a picture for the bank's employee publication, THE MIRROR.

Only one kind of record counts in a legislator's career—his accomplishments as a legislator for our youngsters, a Narcotics Guidance Council, for our senior citizens, free government recreational busing, to name a few. I have been the leading legislative sponsor for a new Assemblyman's office in the 131st District.

As Assemblyman, I pledge a similar working program: diversified state aid to education; expansion of senior citizens tax relief; prison reform, aid to community organizations—all working programs of benefit to all.

I ask your help and your votes to accomplish these aims.

Kodak Consumer Policy of 70's
Begun by Eastman in 1880's

Back in the 1880's a fellow named George Eastman set instructions for the company he founded by advising his customers to let him know if they had any questions about the use of the Kodak camera. The policy of personal attention to customer queries is still in effect at Eastman Kodak today.

Today, the Consumer Markets Kodak Photo Information Department answers about 25,000 customer requests for information each year. A staff of six people will answer your questions about the use of Kodak products.

Newspapers, radio, and television are full of stories about Eastman Kodak's Consumer Information Policy. But the policy isn't new. It started in the late 1800's and was adopted by George Eastman as a way of making his customers feel welcome.

A gratefully received letter from the customer is the highest praise for any product or service. Eastman Kodak appreciates the comments of its customers, because they are the best judges of Kodak products.

Selling cameras, motion pictures, and other products is a difficult business. Making customers happy is what it's all about. Eastman Kodak's policy of personal attention to customer queries is a part of the tradition that has made it the world leader in its business.
