Blacks vs. The American Society

Editor's Note:
His present position is Oshkosh Professor of American History at Marquette University. He is also an Editorial Writer for the Frisbee Voice, the only black newspaper here in Rochester, and Western, New York.

By CHARLES W. CHANDOS

Racial tension is a very tough subject and racial matters are not readily verbalized but are often expressed in deeds. On the bus a few days ago, I overheard a conversation between a Negro and a White. In their talk, one said, “I wonder what would happen if we had our own government around and said, “what is rightfully ours.”

This was a call to an American society, the black man is often neglected.

In Herbert Zinn’s seminal address, “Racism and Mainstream,” he said that because we have been too quiet, we have been left in the dark.

Youngsters Make Movies At White House Recently

Today's children are the visual generation, persuaded by and learning from images of numbers and things they learn from making films that communicate their ideas to others.

That was the message of a special workshop at the White House recently at the White House Conference on Children held here at the Washington, D.C. Children's Center.

Twenty youngsters from Washington were among the 100 children who spent a week at the Children's Center participating in a filmmaking workshop. They learned how to prepare, shoot, edit and guess at a film's meaning and message. They were also taught the importance of accurate and unbiased filmmaking and the need to respect the rights of others.

The children were taught by Henry "Oscar" Anderson, a staff member of the Children's Center.

When they had completed their films, they showed them to the Children's Center staff and to other children who had attended the workshop. They also showed their films to the White House Conference on Children.

BLACK SAILORS of the USS Mason DE-529 braved a snowstorm in Boston Harbor in 1944 when their ship was commissioned. Naval officers, with no precedents to follow, had to be educated for a situation that would not fit into any previous training. The Mason was named for a first-class battleship in World War II.
