The City's Urban Homesteading Lottery offers up to 10,000 per unit for property improvements. Tours of the homes will begin on April 12. The deadline for applications is May 14. The Homesteading Lottery will take place on May 22.

The Urban Homesteading Program is designed to return vacant properties to the tax roll and provide minimally priced homes to people committed to home ownership. Individuals may apply for three homes. If more than one person applies for the same house, as is usually the case, the winner of the house is selected by lottery.

After purchasing the homes, applicants must be able to avoid prolonged absences from school.

You've Got It in the Bag at Star!

By THEOPHILUS TYSON

if you should have been there. And maybe YOU were, maybe you didn't even get to go to church Sunday, February 28, 1982? If you did, you might have missed the Grand Opening of The Star Market at Upper Falls Blvd. at North Clinton Avenue.

The Grand Opening was supposed to last only one week (until the 7th of February) seems to have stretched until it is in its 3rd consecutive week, and may last to the end of March.

And what an opening!! It's been besieged that over 3,500 people passed through Star Market's doors within that 1st hour. The invasion maintains its high attendance record, according to observers who see a trend of regular attendance at Upper Falls Blvd.

The fact that it is located practically at the corner of North Clinton and Upper Falls Blvd. may add to its popularity as a regular marketplace. Instead of traveling down N. Clinton Avenue to the Super Duper or the other Star Market on lower N. Clinton, now residents of N. Clinton, Joseph Avenue and Upper Falls Blvd. only have a short distance to go.

Not only is Star Market conveniently located, but it has many innovations which help to attract people from North, East, South and West. The Grand Prize Entry Blank brought free prizes worth $3,585.00. The Grand Prize being a Remote Control Color 28 inch Color T.V., worth $1,199.75. Second Prize was a 25-inch Color T.V. R.C.A. Console worth $979.75. Third Prize was a Magnavox Stereo Console worth $499.95. There were lesser prizes more fit for children or young folks. Included were a number of Free Gifts and Buy-1-get-1 free items. The first 300 customers got Orchid Corsages, Free Lollipops and Balloons were given away with wooden yardsticks and Decks of Playing Cards. The Cash-a-Hama Game cards are still given at the check-out counter. The coupons taking so much off the retail price and Star Top Value Stamps are also attracting daily shoppers from all over the immediate neighborhood.

The Staff and Officials of Upper Blvd. Star Team have also furnished a handy directory showing exactly where everything is located. The main members of the staff are Gerald O'Connor, Store Manager; Daniel Devault, Assistant Store Manager; Patricia Love, Check-out Manager; Ephraim Daniel, Produce Manager, etc.

What can we say about Upper Blvd. Falls Star Market? Its popularity continues unabated as customers travel from way down N. Clinton Avenue and other nearby streets to do their daily shopping and continue to weave grandiose dreams around the possibility of winning $2,500 instantly with the Cash-a-Hama collector card.

Star Market's services to the neighborhood and community will determine the degree of prosperity it will enjoy. Prosperity which should serve to bring about better relationships through mutual participation in community affairs.

Bikeway Implementation Program

Council Releases Bikeway Implementation Program — The Genesee Transportation Council today released the Bikeway Implementation Program for Monroe County which was adopted at its meeting on January 29, 1982. This program was produced with the help of a committee of transportation professionals and citizen representatives (see attachment). Its major purpose is to identify the specific actions involved in implementing the first phase of the Coordinated Metropolitan Bikeway Plan. The resulting final report contains the following elements:

- A set of 43 roadway locations, identified by the members of the Bikeway Implementation Committee, where improvements are most needed for bicycle travel in Monroe County; the locations, identified by the members of the Bikeway Implementation Committee, where improvements are most needed for bicycle travel in Monroe County;
- The recommended action to alleviate the problem at each of these locations;
- A set of 12 parking area types (parks, shopping areas, etc.) and 21 specific locations where bicycle parking is needed;
- A set of facility guidelines for better bicycle travel, revised from the Bikeway Plan;
- A description of existing bicycle safety education programs in Monroe County;
- An annotated bibliography of bikeway planning and design literature.

These findings were provided by the Bikeway Implementation Committee through a series of workshops using roadway data assembled by the Genesee Transportation Council staff. The major conclusion of the report is that good roadway engineering for bicyclists is simply good roadway engineering for all roadway users, and it therefore makes a "bike lane" approach to bikeway design unnecessary.

The Genesee Transportation Council staff is currently working on obtaining adoption of the Bikeway Implementation Program by Monroe County and the City of Rochester, so that its findings can be formally incorporated into their respective capital improvement programming processes. This adoption would be a major step in effectively implementing the program.

The Genesee Transportation Council is a cooperative regional organization of elected and appointed officials, which is responsible for the coordination of transportation planning activities within the eight-county Genesee/Finger Lakes region. The GTC structure consists of the Council (overall governing board), a Planning Committee (including a number of subcommittees), and a Central Staff.

Copies of the Bikeway Implementation Program are available and can be obtained at the GTC offices, 55 St. Paul Street, Rochester, New York, or by calling (716) 232-6240.

BIOGRAPHY

Dr. Ronald Nelson Kilpatrick was born in New York City on June 15, 1932, the only child of Elsie and John Kilpatrick.

He grew up in Rochester, New York, and graduated from Madison High School. Ron was first team All City and All Sectional for three years in a row; and led his Madison High 1951 basketball team to 22 straight victories, for an unbeaten season.

Ron attended college at Syracuse University and Fayetteville State College in Fayetteville, North Carolina and received his undergraduate and master's degree in Education from Brockport State College at Brockport, New York.

He taught in the Rochester School system as a teacher and served as vice-principal in inner city schools. He was director of a special program which provided vocational training for educationally disadvantaged persons.

He completed his doctorate in Education at the University of Rochester; and in 1973 moved to Atlanta, Georgia, where he served as an associate professor at Atlanta University. During the same years, he completed his doctorate in Law at John Marshall Law School, and was admitted to the Georgia Bar in 1979. He was associated with the law firm of Cox and Richard.

Ronnie has taken that final jump shot after achieving a cross court pass Just travelling a little farther and sooner than us, but as usual, he never wanted to be last.

For That's the Way of a Pro
He always ranked high in the game of life because he played it fair
So there's no doubt, as he passed on through, of whose team he's on up there

For That's the Way of a Pro Pasting and dribbling that ball — still throwing it high — playing in a winning game beyond the sky
Too tall to be reached, he can no longer be fooled
Knowing that in this short life — if you're not shooting straight — you'll forever be disillusioned

"When a customer calls RG&E and says I smell gas, we always treat it as an emergency."

Wayne Crouse, Serviceman

"I won't leave a job until I'm 100% sure in my mind that I've taken care of the situation." To look for a gas leak in a home, gas service people like Wayne Crouse work their way through the whole system—inspecting every pipe, every fitting, every gas appliance—until the leak is found.

"A lot of people don't even know what natural gas smells like." Natural gas actually has no odor. A scent is added to it to enable you to detect leaks.

"If you ever, ever think you smell gas, leave your house and call us." When it comes to checking out a gas leak, RG&E personnel leave nothing to chance. We'll send someone immediately.
Stamps Highlight Black History

Those tiny and colorful postage stamps have a lot of interesting stories to tell. And February, being observed as Afro-American History Month, is the right time to focus on significant black faces, places and events depicted on U.S. stamps. The first such issue appeared in 1948, when Dr. George Washington Carver, the noted agricultural scientist, appeared on a commemorative stamp. Eight years later in 1956, a membrillo (fig) figure, was so honored, and in 1969, the W. C. Handy commemorative stamp was issued as a tribute to America's "Father of the Blues."

Henry O. Tanner, a talented painter who gained international fame while living in France, was honored in 1973. Two years later, Saleem Poor, another Revolutionary War hero, and well-known poet, Paul Laurence Dunbar, were featured on commemoratives. In 1978, the U.S. Postal Service began the Black Heritage USA commemorative series. Harriet Tubman, famed conductor of the Underground Railroad, was portrayed on the first stamp in this series. The 13-cent Tubman issue also marked the first time that a black woman had appeared on a U.S. stamp.

Three other commemoratives have been issued as part of this series. These stamps honored Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., civil rights leader and Nobel Peace Prize recipient; Benjamin Ban- neker, noted mathematician and astronomer; and Whitney M. Young, Jr., former executive director of the National Urban League. A 35-cent regular stamp honoring Dr. Charles R. Drew was issued in June 1981. (Regular issues are printed in larger quantities and are available much longer than commemoratives.) Dr. Drew is credited with developing techniques for separating and preserving blood.

Nobel Prize winner Ralph Bunche was featured on a 20-cent regular stamp issued January 11, 1982 as part of the "Great Americans" series. He won the prize in 1950 for negotiating the armistice between Israel and the Arab states and served with the United Nations for more than two decades.

U.S. stamps will continue to highlight prominent black American faces, places and events. For example, Hall of Fame baseball star Jackie Robinson and pianist and composer Scott Joplin are scheduled to be honored on stamps in 1982 and 1983 respectively. Others are sure to follow.
