

Seeking Consulting Archivist

General project description: The Rochester Museum & Science Center (RMSC) is seeking the services of a Consulting Archivist to assess, organize, and create a finding aid for the archival materials that is part of the Dinkle Family Collection (see the attached inventory list for additional context on collection scope and scale). The Dinkle Family Collection documents the history of an African American family living in Rochester since the late 19th century. Like many African Americans after the Civil War, John Dinkle moved North from the rural South and established himself in Western New York. His family stayed around the Rochester area, living and working in the community that they became part of and helped to establish over the past 150 years. This collection tells the extraordinary stories of ordinary people whose histories have often been left untold. The Consulting Archivist will help to make this collection available for the local community to continue to learn from and understand the lives of African Americans in and around Rochester from the late 1800s to current.

The Consulting Archivist will work collaboratively with RMSC staff to 1) assess the collection and create a processing plan, 2) separate, organize, and rehouse the archival materials in the collection, and 3) create a finding aid in compliance with current best practice standards already in use at the RMSC.

Work plan overview: The Dinkle Family Collection includes a wide range of objects—both 3-dimensional and archival—that require processing, preservation, and creation of access in alignment with current best practices and standards. Working with the RMSC Collections Manager, the Consulting Archivist will help ensure collection integrity and intellectual control while separating the object types for processing. The Consulting Archivist will take responsibility for surveying and assessing the archival materials from the collection, creating a processing plan that will be reviewed by the Director of Collections. Once approved, the Consulting Archivist will begin to organize and rehouse the archival materials. Using the RMSC Archival Processing Guide and example finding aids, the Consulting Archivist will create the Dinkle Family Collection finding aid based on the results of the processing plan. As needed, the Consulting Archivist will connect with the Dinkle Family Collection donor to ensure compliance with privacy laws as well as accuracy and authenticity within the collection's documentation and organization.

The Consulting Archivist will complete the project by December 31, 2024, resulting in an organized and rehoused collection with a corresponding finding aid that will allow broad access to the collection for research and other purposes.

Consultant scope of work, timeline, and budget: The Consulting Archivist will review RMSC finding aids and existing Dinkle Family Collection documentation to gain familiarity with RMSC standards and the collection's history. The consultant will attend bi-weekly check-ins; work with RMSC staff to assess and evaluate the collection for processing; ensure best practices for archival processing, rehousing, and finding aid creation; ensure compliance with all state and federal laws and regulations that may pertain to the contents of the collection; work with the donor and related parties to verify accuracy and authenticity to the best of their ability; and compile documentation resulting in a completed finding aid including a container list.

The completion of the project must occur prior to December 31, 2024 and the total budget for this scope of work is $10,000 for an estimated 200 hours to complete all project deliverables between August 2024 and December 2024 (or sooner). The number of hours required for the project can be negotiated as part of the contract process to ensure fair compensation. Candidates must complete the majority of project work onsite at the RMSC to ensure access to the collection and relevant documentation. The Consulting Archivist must provide their own equipment to complete basic computer-based tasks for this work, and travel expenses must be included within the consultant's cost proposal for the project.

Qualifications for this position include expertise in archival processing and find aid creation, demonstrated by a Master of Science in Information and Library Science degree or equivalent experience; experience with archival collections; and cultural competence in working with African American and Black communities.

To apply: Please submit the following to Elizabeth Alecki, Director of Collections, at epski@rmsc.org by 5 pm EST on July 15, 2024.

- Resume, CV, or summary of relevant experience
- A previous finding aid or archival processing document
- A brief statement describing how your background prepares you for this project.

- Time and cost proposal identifying your project rate (inclusive of any travel expenses) and how you anticipate completing the work within the project milestones.

Evaluation criteria: Proposals will be evaluated by RMSC staff using selection criteria that includes experience in archival processing and finding aid creation, cultural competence, and overall cost.

Questions about the project or role can also be directed to:
